AMC's top leader emphasizes diversity, interoperability

FORT DETRICK, Md. – Gen. Ed Daly said the Army must boost diversity and improve interoperability within supply systems serving the materiel enterprise. Daly, commanding general of Army Materiel Command and the Army's senior sustainer, focused on the two topics during a quarterly update briefing with Army Medical Logistics Command. "The Army always leads the way in society," Daly said, referring to efforts to improve diversity, such as Project Inclusion. "We should be leading the country in this area."

Army's senior sustainer sees McAlester Army's production

McALESTER ARMY AMMUNITION PLANT, Okla. – Army Materiel Command Commander Gen. Ed Daly toured operations to see firsthand how McAlester Army Ammunition Plant provides munitions readiness to the warfighter now, and plans to continue to deliver that same readiness in the future. "We are focused on looking enterprise-wide and identifying our most important production areas and our single points of failure," Daly said. "Then we determine how to modernize those areas. We have to leverage all we can to improve those facilities."

Army Medical Logistics Command commander pins on first star

FORT DETRICK, Md. – Army Medical Logistics Command leaders and staff gathered for a ceremony to celebrate the promotion of their commander, Col. Michael B. Lalor, to the rank of brigadier general. Gen. Ed Daly, commanding general of Army Materiel Command, presided over the promotion ceremony and spoke of Lalor's experience and character. "His entire career, he has proven himself to be a capable and tremendous leader, staff officer and commander who can deliver readiness to the tactical points of contact in support of sustainment warfighting," he said.

Fort Leavenworth's summer transition season beats challenges

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan. – Fort Leavenworth's summer transition season has ended and Garrison Commander Col. Harry Hung said things went well with more than 1,200 families arriving for permanent-change-of-station moves. Since February, Hung tracked each incoming family and worked with several entities on post as part of a pilot initiative begun by Gen. Gus Perna, then Army Materiel Command commander, to improve permanent change-of-station moves by giving inbound and outbound students their request for orders 120-180 days out.

Virtual FC deployment conference brings unexpected benefits

INDIANAPOLIS – Preparing for deployment is tough enough, but during a pandemic the challenges grow exponentially, especially when it comes to the coordination between incoming and outgoing units. To address those challenges and continue a practice that has increased deploying unit success for nearly 16 years, the U.S. Army Financial Management Command held a Theater Orientation Conference in an all-virtual environment for the deploying 175th Financial Management Support Center and the redeploying 469th FMSC recently.
