AMC protects workforce, enhances quality of life

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. – The Army Materiel Command enterprise continues its fight against COVID-19 and since April has implemented several measures throughout its offices, garrisons, depots, ammunition plants and arsenals to protect its workforce while meeting mission requirements for the Army and nation. Several policies and procedures implemented at the AMC headquarters, including maximum use of telework, wearing face coverings in common areas and social distancing, have been beneficial in reducing the risk of exposure to the virus.

Army value of duty sets standards of mission success

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. – Every work day, Army Soldiers and civilians are asked to perform their duty as they take on assignments, tasks and missions that are important to their organization’s goals. “Duty means accomplishing my individual and team assigned tasks,” said Sgt. Maj. Happiness Brown, who works in AMC Operations (G-3). “The AMC mission is to synchronize and integrate the Army’s total capabilities in support of the Chief of Staff of the Army’s priorities and Combatant Command requirements.”

Hatch Act training available for AMC employees

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. – Army personnel, Soldiers and civilian employees swear an oath to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States. It is important that all Army personnel are aware of and understand the permissible and impermissible political activities for Soldiers and civilian employees respectively. AMC employees should view the thirty minute video on permissible and impermissible political activities presented by Chief Ethics Counselor Larry Wilde.
