APS in Europe activated to support ABCT

KAISERSLAUTERN, Germany – The 405th Army Field Support Brigade fully activated its Army Prepositioned Stock-2 sites, and for the first time in the brigade's APS-2 program history it's tasked with outfitting an entire armored brigade combat team being deployed to Europe from the United States. The brigade is tasked with supporting the 1st Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division deploying to Germany from Fort Stewart, Georgia.

Talent Management Requires Continued Effort, Focus

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. – Gen. Ed Daly's column on talent management reflects on the year that has passed since Army senior leaders declared that we are in a war for talent. We have implemented new initiatives, unveiled innovative programs, and challenged the status quo of how we recruit, hire, train, promote, and retain our greatest asset: our people. These efforts are paying off, and we have made great strides to ensure that our ranks are filled with diverse, skilled, educated, and ready officers, NCOs, Soldiers, and civilians.

Developing Army Civilians: Vital for the Future Force

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. – Army Civilians form the institutional backbone of the Army and are an integral part of the Army enterprise providing leadership, stability, and continuity during war and peace. The materiel, installation, and sustainment enterprise employs a third of Army Civilians, with nearly 96,000 working for Army Materiel Command alone. How we manage, grow, and care for our people throughout their careers directly affects and enables our ability to support warfighters and accomplish the Army mission now and in the future.

Knowing your Soldiers: The Key to Talent Management

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. – Command Sgt. Maj. Alberto Delgado, command sergeant major of Army Materiel Command, writes about the importance of senior noncommissioned officers getting to know their Soldiers. He said the Army's ability to fight and win our nation's wars hinges on our most important asset, our people. While each quality of life initiative is important, he said he believes everything starts in the barracks and housing areas, where our Soldiers start and end their days.

Alabama honors its service members, veterans and families

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – Lt. Gen. Donnie Walker, deputy commanding general of Army Materiel Command and Redstone Arsenal senior commander, accepted the state's Military Appreciation Day Proclamation and spoke to the Alabama Legislature during a Joint Session on Feb. 24. "The best part of our story is the story of our people, those who currently wear the uniform, veterans, retirees, Department of Defense civilians and contractors, and their families," he said.

PEOPLE FIRST – QUALITY OF LIFE UPDATES

USAG Ansbach celebrates first-known USO

ANSBACH, Germany – The Soldiers “home away from home” will soon be opening the first-known USO at U.S. Army Garrison Ansbach. Since its formation, over 80 years ago, the United States Organizations, Inc. has been providing support to our nation’s military and their families as they defend our country and its freedoms. With more than 250 centers worldwide, USAG Ansbach will now have a center it can call its own. The USAG Ansbach location will start off as an unstaffed center, utilizing volunteers to man the center.

Camp Humphreys youth center teaches Black history with art

CAMP HUMPHREYS, Republic of Korea – Students at the U.S. Army Garrison Humphreys Smith Middle School and Teen Center participated in an art exhibition Feb. 18 as a creative way for the students to set their differences aside and learn about Black history. Camp Humphreys students and community members walked through the exhibition, admiring the beautiful displays of black culture, discussing what the artists were trying to convey, and learning a little history in the process.

CYS scholarship program offers classes, promotion potential

SEMBACH, Germany – Early childhood education courses are a requirement to move through the ranks at Child and Youth Services, and a scholarship program is available to help employees get there. The scholarship program was put in place to improve morale, performance and retention, and to build employees’ promotion potential, said Joan Thomas, IMCOM-Europe CYS program manager. It’s a way for employees to go from caregiver to center director.

March is National Nutrition Month: Use these tips and enjoy a world of nutritious foods

FORT LEONARD WOOD, Mo. – Healthy eating seems to mean different things to different people. For some, it’s bland, complicated or expensive. For others, it means replacing their favorite foods with something less tasty or convenient. Each March, during National Nutrition Month, the Fort Leonard Wood community is invited to learn more about making informed food choices and developing healthy eating and physical activity habits. This year’s theme calls people to “Celebrate a World of Flavors.”

Italian base commander treats garrison newcomers to seasonal recipe

Recognition for Value Engineering efforts that saved millions

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. – The commander of the U.S. Army Aviation and Missile Command, Maj. Gen. Todd Royar, recognized innovation and collaboration at this year's Value Engineering/ Army Working Capital Fund Investment Program Awards Ceremony on Feb. 25. Value Engineering is used to analyze supplies, services, buildings and systems to achieve the best result, speed delivery, and enhance the performance of the equipment and services.

Journey to Leadership ensures disabled personnel can enroll

ROCK ISLAND ARSENAL, Ill. – The U.S. Army Sustainment Command's Journey to Leadership program is open to all eligible personnel. JTL is ASC's premier leadership program that many participants have been raving about since 2005. The program gives a deep dive into your own personal and professional skill sets, and provides the resources and tools to grow within each facet, stated a recent email released to the workforce.

Training teaches employees how to 'hunt the good stuff'

TOBYHANNA, Pa. – A recent employee survey indicated that a percentage of Tobyhanna Army Depot's workforce struggle with morale and stress. Efforts to equip employees with the skills to deal with issues at work or home led leaders to an on-site resource designed to meet that specific need. Resilience training and education resources are available to active duty, Reserve and National Guard Soldiers, as well as family members and Department of the Army civilians.

The Future of Medical Materiel Life Cycle Management

FORT DETRICK, Md. – The military's ability to deliver unmatched combat health care support is underpinned by an assurance that whenever a medical professional needs medical equipment, it will be there and it will work. That is why the Army Medical Logistics Command is developing into the Army's Life Cycle Management Command for medical materiel.

Medical Supply Integration in U.S. Army Europe and Africa

BAUMHOLDER, Germany – The 16th Sustainment Brigade tested a proof of concept on medical supplies integration, highlighting three opportunities that illustrate how the Army should adapt its doctrine, manning, and medical-logistics forward distribution systems to fully support CLVIII integration to extend its operational reach. Case studies of previous high-intensity conflict have proved that every class of supply matters.

OAW concludes at Fort McCoy; last Afghans depart post

FORT MCCOY, Wisc. – As of Feb. 15, the last Afghan evacuee guests departed Fort McCoy, effectively ending Operation Allies Welcome on post. Their departure marked the end of Fort McCoy's participation in the six-month-long humanitarian mission to provide a safe haven for and relocate Afghan allies who assisted the United States' interests in Afghanistan.
